

Term: “Appropriate Verb Tense”

Definition:

When writing is in the appropriate verb tense, the verb being used accurately represents both what is being written about and when something happened. More specifically, historical events are written about in the past tense, and literature is written about in the present tense. This is more challenging to maintain when history and literature are written about in the same paper (see the allegory papers).