

Term: “Awkward or stilted transitions”

Definition:

Awkward or stilted transitions are transitions that disrupt the fluency of the sentence and do not convey the precise intended meaning. Awkward or stilted transitions also feel forced or robotic and do not flow well within the paragraph or sentence; they even detract the reader from the author’s message versus enhance it.