

Term: “Paraphrased”

Definition:

Paraphrased evidence is evidence that is from the text that is in a scholar’s own words. Scholars should capture the full meaning of what they are paraphrasing without altering, omitting, or adding to that evidence. While limits around how many strings of words can be used in the same order without using quotes (say 3) can lead to artificial paraphrasing, words, phrases, and structures that seem artificial for a scholar to use should be looked into.
